

Utilization of Student Program Facilities in Using Students Leisure Time at University: Ecological Social Perspective

by Farida Hanum, Maryani, L. Hendrowibowo

ABSTRACT

The involvement of students in quality and useful activities in their free time can provide useful experience to become a young generation with knowledge and skills. This research aims to (1) Prove that family encouragement significantly influences the use of student affairs program facilitators in the use of free time for UNY students; (2) Proving that family encouragement significantly influences the use of student program facilitators in the use of free time for UNY students; (3) Proving that support from study programs/departments significantly influences the use of student program facilitators in the use of YSU students' free time; (4) Proving that the availability of facilities significantly influences the use of student program facilitators in the use of YSU students' free time.

This research uses a mixed method study approach with a quantitative qualitative design. In quantitative research, the sample size was 270 Yogyakarta State University students. Quantitative data analysis was analyzed using Anova and SEM statistical tests, and for qualitative data data analysis techniques were carried out referring to the steps proposed by Miles & Huberman. The results show that there are four aspects that influence student involvement in participating in various types of UKM at UNY, namely family encouragement, peer encouragement, environmental encouragement of study programs and majors, and encouragement of the availability of facilities. Family encouragement has a significant influence, as evidenced by the calculated t value = 14.75 > 1.96. Peer encouragement has a significant influence, t value = 16.14 > 19.6. The environmental support of the study program or department has a significant influence, t value = 18.51 > 1.96. The availability of facilities also has a significant influence, t value = 14.98 > 1.96. All aspects of social ecology have a positive and significant influence on student involvement in various UKM-UNY activities. So it becomes an important factor in increasing the quantity and quality of the use of student program facilities in the use of YSU students' free time.

Kata Kunci: UNY Student Programs, UNY Student Facilities, leisure time, Social ecology