ABSTRACT

The aim of workshop on the publication of ecological-oriented literary for junior high/ high school teachers in Yogyakarta was to improve the competence of teachers in creative writing, especially short stories writing. In addition, this program was also intended to develop ecological awareness among teachers through literary means.

Program target audiences were Indonesian Language and Literature teachers at junior high / high school in Yogyakarta.

Participants were representatives of several schools who received an invitation from the team work. In this program, the team work collaborated with the Yogyakarta Cantrik publisher who had been active in publishing literary works.

The workshop was designed with a comprehensive approach through two training formats. First, the training format was designed classically using the form of talk shows, lectures, and discussions. The second format was structured tutorials or assistance. At this phase, the participants were guided individually by a tutor or instructor. The classical workshop lasted for two days, while the creative writing tutorials and publication of literary works was carried out in five days.

The results of this program can be categorized into two ways. (1) participants were motivated by the process of workshop to publish literary works. In addition, the participants have more ecological awareness. (2) by product, this program succeeded in producing one anthology of short stories written by participants. It also showed that the participants' literary competence has increased and developed.
