ABSTRACT

This study aimed to find out how the potential of yard that has been cultivated for a long time by the residents of the Clumprit villages, especially if associated with the Home's Sustainable Food Area (Kawasan Rumah Pangan Lestari/KRPL) and how the contribution of the PKK's cadres as a driving agents from the Government's various programs up to the level of the village. This research used qualitative research methods. The selection techniques of informant use purposive sampling, with the informant amount to 8 people, consist of PKK's cadres and residents of the Clumprit villages which make use of yard in the field of agriculture, animal husbandry, and fisheries. The data collection techniques use document review, secondary data, and semi-open interviews. Data analyzed with iterative strategies follow the principle of constant comparisons. The results showed that: (1) land use of yard by the Clumprit residents was done since long time ago, before the Government doing socialization about the Home's Sustainable Food Area (Kawasan Rumah Pangan Lestari/KRPL). The patterns of yard land use by the Clumprit residents generally a mixture of (multi commodity). Landlord planted a wide variety of commodities, ranging from vegetables, plants the toga (pharmacy), fruits, and food crops; even for livestock or fish. For residents who make the attempt on the grounds as the main source of family income, usually involving members of his family in order to optimize revenues and minimize the cost of maintenance or care. (2) in relation to the PKK, the result of this research shows that it takes the PKK's cadres 'militant' to be the motor driving the various agencies/government program to the level of the village. In particular it is the home's sustainable food (Rumah Pangan Lestari/RPL) if indeed the program will be implemented extensively in the society especially in the Clumprit residence. The PKK's cadre 'militants' can be considered a role models, 'extension officers' and 'mediators' for many people who want to know how big Government programs got a response from the community at the local level.
