ABSTRACT

Abstract

This research aims to determine the price stabilization of the New Order; the policy of the New Order government in stabilizing prices and the reasons for the New Order government to implement the policy. As we know that Indonesia achieved food self-sufficiency in 1984 and succeeded in increasing agricultural output, especially rice through the Green Revolution program. The New Order government also used Bulog as an institution that handled the stability of prices for basic goods for the community. The problems that arise from the topics raised include what policies were taken by the New Order government in an effort to stabilize the prices of basic commodities and also why the prices of basic necessities must be stabilized. This research is historical research, and the method used is historical method which consists of, First, heuristics or searching for sources related to research. Second, verification or source criticism which includes external criticism and internal criticism. Third, interpretation or interpreting existing historical facts. Lastly, historiography or historical writing.
