ABSTRACT

The Rejo Mulyo Women's Farmer Group (Kelompok Wanita Tani/KWT) is a farmer group whose members are mostly housewives who are farmer wives with the main activities of helping husbands in the fields/gardens and taking care of the household. Most members of KWT have a middle to lower economic level. With the availability of available time, activities that have the potential to bring income to the family are needed. With the background of farmers, the development in agriculture becomes relatively easy to do. This DLK activity aims to introduce the types of orchids in Indonesia (species and hybrids), increase participants' knowledge and skills in orchid cultivation, and introduce the potential for developing orchid cultivation products. The form of activities to be carried out is in the form of lectures and practices. Evaluation of success is carried out by pretest-posttest, filling out questionnaires and monitoring cultivation results. The results of the service will be published in the Journal of Mathematics and Natural Sciences Community Service and MIPA Education
