ABSTRACT

Comics have also been considered an important pedagogical resource in the world of education. This is because when properly explored in the classroom, comics with their distinctive features have great power to: tell a story and convey messages, contributing to stimulating active participation and creativity of students. Learning during the Covid-19 pandemic experienced several problems, so it needed the right solution. This service aims to; 1) develop teacher competence in compiling comics, 2) produce learning media in the form of comics during a pandemic for social studies subjects. The training was held online in November 2021, with 30 teachers from Wonosobo, Central Java participating. At the initial stage, there was an equalization of perceptions and FGD of the service team with the MGMP management, continued with the preparation of comics, and the implementation of training. The training is carried out online using zoom meeting media with lecture methods, questions and answers, workshops, and mentoring. The results of the training are: 1) as many as 30 teachers graduated in the implementation of the training so that they have an increased ability to compose comics as a learning medium.
