

Developing E-Learning as Blended Learning to Support Interactive Multimedia Development Courses (2nd Year Research)

by Sugeng Bayu Wahyono, Ariawan Agung Nugroho, Haryanto

ABSTRACT

The use of E-Learning as a course complement can be very helpful in learning activities. Appropriate planning and methods is expected to help students improve understanding in lecture activities. The use of E-Learning as a complement is expected to facilitate students in accessing learning resources wherever and whenever, as well as facilitate lecturers in organizing their lectures. The type of research that will be carried out is research development, and the results of this research is article that is expected to be published in proceedings and also e-learning content products to assist lectures in the subject course, in accordance with the needs analysis in preliminary research. assessment results by experts, both material and media, showing that the research product is very good and therefore suitable for use in the course.

Kata Kunci: E-Learning, Blended Learning, interactive multimedia for learning