ABSTRACT

Education in Indonesia has made considerable progress since independence in 1945. Even so, the progress of education is not necessarily followed by its quality. The compulsory education program launched by the government seems to only make teaching and learning activities a monotonous routine. Public awareness for reading is still very lacking and concerning. The lack of reading culture does not only threaten the foundation of education, but aspects of the life of other nations and nations. Global competition requires the improvement of quality Indonesian Human Resources in order to be able to advance the country. Literacy improvement training activities need to be encouraged again, especially for the younger generation in Pondok 1 Hamlet, Widodomartani, Ngemplak, Sleman, Yogyakarta. Youth as the core generation of state development is expected to be the foundation that will bring Indonesia to the golden age.
