ABSTRACT

This reasearch aims to train MGMP History teachers in SMA / MA Bantul Regency in improving character education based learning taught through history learning. Character education is one of the important factors in education in Indonesia. Various subjects in schools now have implemented a character education system that is contained in each subject. In this case the integrated training of character education is expected to increase the interest of history teachers to insert character education in learning material.

The target of this research is the MGMP History High School / MA teacher in Bantul Regency who was given training so as to be able to increase interest in providing historical lessons related to character education. The problem was solved by the method of mentoring and training MGMP History High School teachers in Bantul Regency. The method ensured the active involvement of each history teacher who was incorporated in the High School / MA History MGMP in Bantul Regency.

The results of this training activity are the participants (teachers) have the ability to be educators and instructors in the history of professional subjects at the Senior High School level. The teacher can design and integrate character values ??in history learning. And the teacher becomes a character model for students.
