ABSTRACT

Classical guidance is a service activity provided to a number of students in a group with a relatively large number of participants. Classical guidance service activities aim to help students achieve independence in their lives, complete and optimal development in the personal, social, learning and career fields; and achieve congruency between thoughts, feelings and behavior. The use of digital applications in the pandemic era is an alternative medium for online guidance and counseling services, especially classical guidance services. The Screencast-O-Matic is an application that can be used by counselor to easily present the material by their creativity. During the community service activities, counselor participated the training of using its application. The steps for training activities include pre-test, delivery of material, discussion, assignment, simulation of Screencast-O-Matic Application, post-test and final evaluation. The pre and post test results showed that the training participants' knowledge and insight had increased, namely the pre-test average score of 77.55% and the post-test average score of 82.55%. Follow-up training activities with themes and other media need to be implemented to improve the quality of guidance and counseling teachers in providing guidance and counseling services in schools.
