ABSTRACT

This community service program is aimed to give a scientific publication writing training to Bahasa Indonesia teachers of senior high school in Sleman region by providing suitable learning materials to enhance their scientific publication writing skill.

The subject of this community service program was all Bahasa Indonesia teachers of SMA/SMK/MA in Sleman region. This program is realized in a form of journal article writing training. Invitations and pamphlets are distributed to the schools in Sleman region. The team had a position as the presenter of the learning materials.

The results of this community service program are eight script articles from the participants. There were 18 teachers as the participants in this program. The program is held on September, every Tuesday in 5, 12, and 19 September 2017 in Faculty of Languages and Arts, State University of Yogyakarta. In the first day of the training, the participants are provided with learning materials by the team. In the second day, the participants brought their draft articles and discussed it in the class and the team and other participants gave inputs to the discussed draft. In the third day, the participants brought their revised draft and chose what journal title should be submitted to the team and discussed it in the class. The finalized journal could be submitted to the team directly or through the e-mail, if it is needed to be revised again.
