ABSTRACT

This study aims to examine the theoretical model of the parenting role model to the performance athlete through the mediator of achievement motivation. The hypothesis of this research is the theoretical model used to measure the performance athlete through achievement motivation mediator with empirical data. The population of this study is aquatic athletes who follow the Festival Acuatiq Indonesia 2018 in Surabaya. Sampling technique using Total sampling. Samples in this study were 39 athletes consisting of 12 athletes swimming, 4 athletes synchronous swimming, and 23 athletes water polo athletes. Data collection using scale and documentation. The data analysis uses the SmartPLS program to test the suitability of the measurement model with existing data in the field. The results showed Goodness of Fit (GoF) values: 0.271 can be used as a model used to measure individual performance through achievement motivation mediator in accordance with empirical data. The test results show that the role of the parenting model is direct, positive and significant to the athlete's achievement and there is a significant role model of care for the employee through the mediator of achievement motivation.
