

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY TRAINING FOR TEACHERS ON YOGYAKARTA

by Nurhadi, Tony W, Andreas M Kuncoro

ABSTRACT

Community service performed with the aim of improving the ability of teachers to understand the proper research methodology. Understanding of research methodology is expected to help teachers produce scientific work.

Methods of these activities in the form of training to high school teachers in the province. Teacher guided to apply the training in order to improve the ability of teachers to do research. Community service activities of research methodology training for high school teachers in the province carried out by the method of face-to participants 25 teachers. Implementation of the activities carried out face to face meetings are given by way of lectures concepts for the purposes of research methodologies, including examples of quantitative research. Activity continued to lecture the whole theory.

The results of the research methodology training Community service program for high school teachers in the province conducted properly and smoothly according to plan, and most of the participants were able to receive the material well. Participants enthusiastically with activity demonstrated by the activity of the participants in all activities. Debriefing process takes place smoothly by involving materials raised in devotion. Based on the evaluation of the activities already undertaken can be given advice these activities can be continued with further material in accordance enthusiasm of the participants with consequent additional implementation time and cost that follows the activities. The need for further activities that are not limited only to the methodology but assisting the preparation of scientific articles / research for publication in accordance suggestions or requests of the participants

Kata Kunci: research methodology, scientific paper