ABSTRACT

This Community Service Program activity was carried out based on a situation analysis with the following problems: (1) Literary works published in magazines such as cerkak, short stories, illustrated stories or serial comics, to the excitement of literary writers or senders 'that's all' which is usually already 'has a big name'; (2) Lack of knowledge about good and correct writing by new writers; (3) Javanese language teachers have a moral obligation to participate in preserving the Javanese language, among others by developing Javanese writing creativity. Teachers have an obligation to master Javanese learning material. One form of writing that must be developed by the teacher is fiction writing. Fiction writing has recreational and deductive advantages that must be taught to students. Following up on this problem, the PPM team from the Department of Regional Language Education, FBS UNY, held a Fiction Writing Training for Middle School Javanese Language Teachers in the City of Yogyakarta. PPM activities have been carried out smoothly through the zoom application with virtual meetings. This activity was attended by 29 Javanese language teachers from MGMP Yogyakarta City. The result of this activity was the collection of cerkak made by the training participants and the creation of an anthology book of cerkak.
